

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing concerning the Low Power FM (LPFM) initiative. I am against this initiative and request that the initiative be rejected. From my research, this initiative will displace many of the existing broadcast stations or require expensive recapitalization, a recapitalization that many small and independent radio stations cannot afford. This mandated change will force many of these independent radio stations out of business, much as the mandated gasoline storage tank replacement initiative did to the independent gas stations under the guise of environmental protection.

One of theses potentially displaced radio stations would be my local Airl station. Airl provides my family and community with pleasant, non-vulgar, music, education, and news. Unlike many radio stations, Airl music can be played in a public environment, free from vulgar language (lyrics and radio personalities). Airl provides information and education concerning living an honest and moral life. Airl provides information on issues affecting the local community and the nation.

My concern is that the Low Power FM (LPFM) imitative is being forced through by corporate big business. The small independent stations will not be able to recapitalize and will be forced out of business. In their place, the public will be subjected to corporate stations, which produce morally destructive radio shows along the likes of Howard Stern.

Thank you for your consideration,
Ron Moon
